

Moose International Department of Communications

The Department of Communications helps to raise visibility about the programs and services of Moose International among its members, the media, the general public and other key stakeholders. Within the Moose Fraternity, we serve more than 1 million men and women through the following communication tools and programs:

1. Moose magazine, sent six times a year to each member's home, features news about Mooseheart Child City and School, Moosehaven retirement community, member benefits, member profiles, lodge and chapter news, Women of the Moose, community service, and much more. The magazine also is available online at www.mooseintl.org.
2. Moose Leader, sent electronically six times a year to Lodge and Association officers, features nuts-and-bolts, "need-to-know" information to help lodges and associations perform at the highest level. Moose Leader also is available online at www.mooseintl.org in the Members Only section.
3. MoosePages are provided for lodge/chapter, moose legion and association officers seeking a free and simple option to establish an Internet presence. Call 630-966-2218, email vbaker@mooseintl.org, or visit the Members Only section of www.mooseintl.org to establish your web presence today!
4. The Moose Journalism Awards program, in which every editor of a lodge, association or higher degree newsletter – and every operator of a lodge/chapter, higher degree or association website – is invited to submit his or her work in competition with Moose editors from all over North America. Winners are announced at the International Convention every year. The contest call for publications will be available online in the Members Only section of the website and a separate contest call for Moose websites will also be available there. The deadline for submitting newsletter entries is March 3, 2017. The deadline for submitting website entries is one week earlier, February 24, 2017. Any questions, please call us at 630-966-2229.
